TESTS SHOW BLUE MOLD TREATMENT WON'T DO DOUBLE DUTY AGAINST FLEA BEETLES

Tobacco growers have hoped that the chemical treatments advised for control of blue mold would also be effective in killing tobacco flea beetles. Benzine and paradichlorobenzene do kill some flea beetles, as tobacco growers have observed, says S. B. Fenne, tobacco disease specialist at V. P. I., but the blue-mold treatments do not kill enough of the flea beetles to warrant growers in suspending the use of rotenone dust for flea-beetle control.

Mr. Fenne bases this advice on experiments last season in the Carolinas and Virginia in which State and Federal entomologists cooperated in tests of the effect of blue-mold treatments as a flea-beetle control. They have reported that with light cloth covers for the seedbeds, the effect of the chimicals was slight, in beds covered with heavy closewhich, tendays after the dus publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect her interests.

Home Hardware

The character of the house as well as the coloring and finish of the woodwork should be carefully considered in selecting hardware for the home. A hardware design suited to a home of elaborate architectural style is out of place in an informal home of simple lines. Straight-forward, unpretentious design is best for the small house. Since the hardware of a home gets plenty of usage, good quality here is of more importance than in some other features. Frequently the substitution of new hardware for old will do much to liven up the appearance of the entire house.

Italy's Synthetic Fruits

Although Italy has no need to develop synthetic fruits as part of the self-sufficiency campaign, since millions of tons are raised in the country every year, Sicilian sweets makers still make an art of forcing artificial lemons, oranges, apples, pears, and even strawberries out of candy, some of which are so perfect that taste is the only means of distinguishing them from the real thing.

Vegetable Laxative With Proved Feature

The punctual, satisfying relief from constipation and its headaches, billousness, bad breath, so often experienced by users of this laxative, is mainly due to its combination of purely vegetable ingredients.

BLACK-DRAUGHT's principal ingredient has high medical recognition as an "intestinal tonic-laxative"; helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles.

A little of this spicy, aromatic product by simple directions at bedtime, generally allows time for a good night's rest; acts gently and thoroughly next morning.

Next time, take time-tested, economical BLACK-DRAUGHT.

Highway Building Costs Not Limited to 'Surface'

What is a road? Motorists, despite their constant use of highways, might have a difficult time answering that question.

Evidence indicates that the average motorist considers a road, from the standpoint of construction cost, as a slab of surfacing material over which he drives his car. He ignores the elements represented in the right-of-way and the establishment of grades and laying of base materials.

The fundamental factors are fairly permanent; in other words, not subject to destruction nor to maintenance and replacement costs. The right-of-way, for instance, is paid for once and then may be forgotten. If the grade is established to conform to official standards—and it must be if it is partially financed by federal aid funds—then it, too, is subject to but a single initial cost.

With road experts making enormous progress in their efforts to salvage base materials, about the only factor which is subject to deterioration and wear is the actual surface. If the motorist thinks of this feature as the entire road, he may get a false impression of the longevity of the highway which he builds, although modern expensive surfaces do show vastly improved durability.

In connection with their advocacy of a better comprehension of what constitutes a road, highway engineering officials would have another aspect of highway life more thoroughly understood. It is that relating to the effect of traffic upon surface destruction. The most searching of all investigations conducted by federal scientists reveal that it is not the service it is called upon to render so much as the climatic conditions which it must resist that determines the degree of maintenance that a given highway will require.

Famed Wild-West Bandit Was Born in New York

Billy the Kid, one of the most famous outlaws of the Southwest, was born in New York city November 25, 1859. His real name was William H. Bonney and he was the son of William H. and Kathleen Bonney. In 1862 the family moved to Coffeyville, Kan., where the father died. The mother, with her two children, moved to Colorado, where she married a man named Antrim. About 1865 the family moved to Santa Fe, N. M., and in 1868 to Silver City, N. M.

The boy had some schooling, but by the time he was 12 years old he had become a frequenter of saloons and gambling places and an adept at cards. When 15 years old he quarreled with his stepfather and left home. Almost at once he embarked on a criminal career and when he was 21 years old he had slain more than a score of men and had shot his way out of jail repeatedly. In July, 1881, Sheriff Pat Garrett, of Lincoln county, in New Mexico, beat Billy to the draw and ended his career. Garrett, who had been elected for the sole purpose of ridding New Mexico of Billy, had captured him once and lost him when the Kid, under sentence of death, slew two guards and fled the jail.

Garrett traced him to the vicinity of Fort Sumner. The two men met with pistols in a darkened room. Garrett fired first.

Panama City

Panama City on the Pacific is filled with fine old churches of the Spanish Colonial era, moss-covered forts and battlements and historic buildings. The hotels, however, are new and modern. In addition to the canal, with its ever changing scene of water-borne traffic, the gay life and round of parties with the military and the navy crowd when ships are in and the excitement of the carnival season, there is plenty of time for peaceful repose along the miles of beaches. Then there is fishing, both near the mainland and out among the Cocos islands in the Pacific. Planes and fast modern ships have brought Panama almost to the back door of the United States and its natural advantages have made of it one of our most popular tropical recreation resorts.

Dripping Pipes

The sound of waste water gurgling through the soil pipes between the partitions is objectionable to most home owners and need not be tolerated. The noise is overcome by insulating the soil pipes with a pipe covering. Sweating pipes in the basement sometimes prevent use of that space as recreation room, workshop or laundry. Cold-water lines covered with non-sweat insulation will not drip. Soil pipe insulation has to be done before walls are closed and plastered, but dripping pipes are easily reached and can be corrected.

Auto Clutch Adjustments

The clutch pedal should move an inch in any car before it begins to take effect. As the facings wear, however, this margin of clearance assured by the factory adjustment begins to diminish. Eventually it will reach the vanishing point and the pedal will rest tightly against the toeboard with the result that the clutch springs are always compressed. All manner of clutch trouble may follow failure to see that proper clearance is maintained.
